THEORY OF CHANGE
thing is designed and unhappy.

Your tactics can make a difference, but your strategy—your commitment to a way of being and a story to be told and a promise to be made—can change everything.

If you want to make change, begin by making culture. Begin by organizing a tightly knit group. Begin by getting people in sync.

Culture beats strategy—so much that culture is strategy.
Are you asking the right questions?

It's tempting to just dive into the data when you're designing a program or creating a strategy. But starting with a specific, answerable question will keep you focused, helping you discover actionable insights.

Goals

1. Provide a space to have productive conversations with peers, whether technical or emotional support
2. Decenter Nexus from every data conversation — directly connect people from different sectors (nonprofit, public, academic, private) to one another
3. Quicker and more specific technical support from peers
4. Make it easier for orgs to acquire talent and tools

Needs

1. Corporate sponsors for events
2. Philanthropic support for staffing and adjacent capacity-building efforts
